cad file. The upgrade seems to be going well except for the new installed system cannot find my hard drive (which is a brand new drive). I'm running AutoCAD from CD, and the file path is C:\Program Files\Autodesk\AutoCAD 2013. I have tried the following things in order: Run the upgrade in Safe Mode and bypass the hard drive. I attempted to remove Windows and then reinstall, first to C:\ and then to C:\Windows\system32. I created a new partition on the hard drive (which is working) to access it. I verified the hard drive boot and partition by hitting F8 in BIOS and checking my drive letter for boot order. I verified the hard drive for the Windows Install file by running it and checking the original location by clicking Details. I checked for the windows' system32 folder (C:\Windows\system32). I'm not getting any errors, but the problem is that when I try to open any file in AutoCAD, it opens in my 64 bit system, and then complains that it cannot find the file. Any ideas? A: You should try to boot the original system again, and see if it works. If it doesn't work, then you can install again the 64 bit OS, and try to connect it to the same drive as the other OS. If this doesn't work, try to boot the 64 bit OS in Safe Mode. This would hopefully give you access to the other partition, and you can install or update 64 bit. You can also remove the partition, and have Windows try to make a new one. This should work, as long as you leave the drive space available for it to install. Q: PhoneGap, iOS and "app does not appear in simulator or on device" I'm new to PhoneGap and I'm having issues getting it to work. I'm trying to get an app to run on iOS with PhoneGap. I have set up the plugins.xml file and I have added PhoneGap.js and the CSS files that are required. I then added the code to the config.xml file. Everything builds OK but when I run the app on the simulator, I get a bunch of errors saying "Error code -1". In X 82157476af
